Mariah Carey carrying a new addition

You may be able to skip to loo on TTC

PROPOSAL Even if they can't get a seat on the subway, former TTC chair Howard Moscoe thinks transit riders are entitled to one in the washroom. The TTC will study the feasibility of installing self-cleaning pay toilets, such as the one recently opened on Queens Quay, as a result of Moscoe's plea at yesterday's transit commission meeting.

Moscoe suggested the washrooms, which cost about $400,000 each, would pay for themselves with a loonie or toonie per flush.

New federal copyright bill provokes polar reactions

The bill aimed at modernizing Canada's Copyright Act is shaping up to be a love-it-or-hate-it affair.

Reaction to the proposed law came fast and furious after it was tabled in the House of Common yesterday.

For intellectual property lawyer Barry Sookman, the bill's highlights include a provision that would allow for so-called mash-ups — the creation of new music and video from copyrighted material mixed together.

Business leaders, and especially Canada's video game industry, welcomed the bill's tough provisions prohibiting the cracking of digital locks.

Those responsible for collecting royalties for Canadian musicians were somewhat less enamoured with the bill.

The Canadian Private Copying Collective was hoping it would include a levy on MP3 players, as already exists on blank CDs and mini-discs.

Instead the bill allows users to copy songs from their hard drive onto an MP3 player without breaking copyright laws.

The Alliance of Canadian Cinema, Television and Radio Artists (ACTRA) said it is relieved to see the government taking steps to bring Canada's copyright laws into the 21st century, but is alarmed artists are being left out.

Consumers

- Sweeping new federal copyright legislation would touch on virtually every area of the digital superhighway, affecting consumers' relationship with DVDs, CDs, MP3 players, the web, and even their Internet service providers.

Canadian claims he was beaten by Israeli soldiers

GAZA FLOTILLA A Canadian activist says he was beaten while in detention in Israel after Israeli soldiers "attacked" a flotilla of ships delivering humanitarian supplies to the Gaza Strip.

Rifat Audeh, a St. Catharines resident, was one of three Canadians detained during the raid that took place in international waters Monday. Israeli troops boarded the ships carrying supplies to the blockaded area, killing at least nine of the pro-Palestinian activists on board.

Audeh, 37, told The Canadian Press he and other activists were physically abused by the troops.

"I was beaten by the soldiers. They tied my hands behind my back, put a blindfold on me, threw me on the ground," he said in a telephone interview from Jordan, where he arrived after being deported by Israeli authorities.

"I thought they were actually going to break my arms and legs while they were doing this because it was very violent."

Teen charged in sex assaults on seniors

A 14-year-old boy has been charged after sexual assaults against two women who are residents of a Toronto nursing home. Police say one woman in her 60s and one woman in her 90s were sexually assaulted Sunday in a long-term care facility in west Toronto. Security cameras captured a suspect's picture as he left the building.

Employment equity lacking: Report

Race and gender remain workplace barriers in Ontario, Census data reveals

A new report based on 2005 Census data being released today shows that visible minorities in Ontario are far more likely to live in poverty, have trouble finding a job and earn less in the workplace.

Sexism and racial discrimination "pack a double wallop," for visible minority women who earned 53.4 cents for every dollar a white man earned, said economist Sheila Block who wrote the report for the Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives.

"The Census data reveals that in 2005, at the height of pre-recession economic prosperity, women from racialized backgrounds working in Ontario faced real barriers to success," she said. "They earned about half as much as non-racialized men.

"There's no doubt the situation is worse today."

Statistics Canada, in its 2008 report on income from 2005 Census data, found that recent immigrant men earned 63 cents for every dollar earned by Canadian-born men. Recent female immigrants earned just 54 cents.

Legislation needed?

- The report points to the urgent need for Ontario to re-introduce employment equity legislation that was dropped in the mid 1990s, economist Sheila Block said.

News in brief

MISSISSAUGA A bizarre tale of Toronto-area city workers being bound in duct tape and spanked has been explained as simple "horseplay." Janice Baker, Mississauga's city manager, says an investigation found the workers were engaging in "locker-room" behaviour. An employee in the transportation and works department complained last November about abuse he captured on his cellphone camera. Baker says the supervisor and employees were disciplined, but all have kept their jobs.

Downtown blackout serves as G20 dry run

HYDRO Thousands of people in downtown Toronto were left without power over the lunch hour yesterday during an outage believed to have been caused by an underground cable.

In all, an estimated 20,000 hydro customers saw their power go down around 11:35 a.m. — an event that flooded the Internet with tweets about people trapped in elevators.

The city and its major institutions took the blackout in stride. A major hospital switched to emergency power, subway trains and streetcars were unaffected, and the headquarters of the major banks managed to keep their lights on.

One Tim Hortons continued selling its remaining doughnuts to customers after its coffee ran dry.

With the G20 summit of world leaders coming to the city at month's end, at least one business saw it as an opportunity to put its summit backup plan to work.

"We've had to shut down our office and send everybody home," said Jeff Sciarra, who works at a technology company.

"But we have our G20 plan in place, and we're trying to enable that right now," said Sciarra, who added most people would be working from home.

The major disruptions expected from G20 security measures, and the threat of protests, reportedly has many downtown businesses making contingency plans, including having staff work from home.

A Toronto Hydro spokesperson said it was believed an underground cable fault was to blame, and crews had turned their attention to finding the source of the problem in the afternoon.

Retirement home regulation could lead to for-profit care: Opposition

MPP itching to create tougher bedbug laws

Tenants have a right to sleep tight and not let the bedbugs bite, says Liberal MPP Mike Colle.

Inspired by Toronto Star columnist Joe Fiorito's crusade against bedbugs in public housing, low-income rental units, and seniors' homes, Colle on Thursday will introduce private member's legislation to protect tenants against the nasty parasites.

"It seems to be so persistent, these things won't go away — it's like a real scourge," the Eglinton-Lawrence MPP said in an interview yesterday.

The Renters' Right to Know Act would shield people from having to endure the unpleasantness of bedbug bites in their rented houses and apartments.

18 Bedbugs, which can live for up to 18 months without eating, are tiny and resilient, residing in the smallest of spaces, like electrical outlets and vents. Their eggs can even withstand vacuuming.

"As much as the city is trying to deal with it and public health is trying to deal with it, I think we need to get it up another level to really try to tackle this thing, because it just destroys people's lives," said Colle.

"I've had a 90-year-old constituent of mine that was crying because she got rid of all her furniture, had the place fumigated, bought new furniture, brought it in and they came back again," he said.

"So it not only affects your health, it really affects your whole state of mind."

Colle's legislation would amend the 2006 Residential Tenancies Act "to require landlords to disclose any information with respect to bedbugs in the rental unit or the residential complex before a tenancy agreement is entered into." That would entail a "bedbug information report" to be presented by a landlord to a prospective tenant prior to the signing of any lease.

10 couples to get hitched on Pride floats

FESTIVAL Organizers of Toronto's annual Pride parade plan to celebrate five years of legalized same-sex weddings in Canada by marrying 10 couples on moving floats during this year's event.

Five of the couples who plan to marry are from the United States, where for the most part same-sex marriage is still illegal.

This year marks the 30th anniversary of Toronto's Pride parade.

The festival is being held a week later this year, and will not conflict with the G20 summit.

Police speak to witness in fatal car stabbing

DEATH Toronto police say they have been able to speak with a man who is a witness in a fatal stabbing last weekend.

Police had said David Winn, 54, was in a car when the man driving the vehicle was stabbed in the neck by a woman.

Their only witness had been a six-year-old girl who told police her mother had stabbed her father.

The driver of the car, Ludlow Gillespie, 25, was pronounced dead in hospital and Melissa Lewis, 24, is charged with second-degree murder.

Canadians plugged in

Despite privacy fears, 912,000 joined Facebook in May

Privacy concerns don't seem to have scared Canadians off Facebook.

Canada passed the 16 million users mark in May, according to research firm Inside Network.

An estimated 912,380 Canadians signed up for the site last month, a six per cent increase in membership.

That spike came at the same time that two Toronto residents promoted the idea of Quit Facebook Day on May 31. The campaign drew pledges to leave Facebook from almost 36,000 users worldwide, but most simply shrugged and went back to posting status updates.

500M There has been speculation recently that Facebook is approaching 500 million users worldwide, although it has only officially stated it has more than 400 million users.

An estimated 47.9 per cent of Canadians are on Facebook, making Canada one of the most plugged-in countries in the world, said Justin Smith, founder of Inside Network.

While Facebook does not issue specific membership numbers, Inside Network uses data provided to advertisers to gather insights about the social networking site.

Overall, Canada is the fourth largest market on Facebook, on a per capita basis, behind Iceland, Norway and Hong Kong. About 59.6 per cent of Iceland's population has a Facebook profile.

Vaccine supply, demand out of sync during H1N1 outbreak: King

HEALTH Ontario's pandemic vaccine program was a classic case of supply-demand mismatch, a new report on the province's response to the H1N1 outbreak suggests.

King

There wasn't enough vaccine when the public was clamouring for it and by the time supplies had swelled, demand was fading, according to a report from Dr. Arlene King, the province's chief medical officer of health.

"To be blunt, from Oct. 26 — the date of the launch of our H1N1 immunization program — there was never an alignment between H1N1 vaccine supply, demand and our capacity to deliver it," King said.

King said a variety of factors were to blame, including the fact that the province didn't know from one week to the next how much vaccine it would be getting from the federal government. King estimated about 38 per cent of Ontarians were vaccinated, near the low end of vaccination rates among provinces and territories. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Child porn charges for teacher

Man arrested at school after police discover images of boys

A teacher was arrested at a Toronto junior school and is now facing child pornography charges after police raided a west-end home Tuesday.

Stewart Adams, 46, is a teacher at Kingsview Village Junior School, near Islington Avenue and Dixon Road.

He is charged with possessing child pornography, making child pornography, making available child pornography and accessing child pornography.

"The making-pornography charge does not have to do with production of the images," said Const. Janelle Blackadar.

Info session

- An information session for parents will be held at Kingsview Village Junior School today at 3:30 p.m.

Stewart Adams

The charges come after a home near Kipling Avenue and Eglinton Avenue W. was searched on Tuesday following an undercover police sting that found explicit images of boys ranging in age from five to 12.

More than 700 kindergarten to Grade 5 students attend Kingsview.

In a letter sent Tuesday to parents of the school's students, principal Sheila Chichelnik wrote: "I want to emphasize that, as far as we are aware, any charges do not involve any students from our school."

Police find vehicle allegedly driven by murder suspect

HOMICIDE Toronto police have recovered a car allegedly driven by a man wanted in the murder of a 28-year-old west-end woman. The body of Lucita Charles was found in an apartment near Jane and Lawrence on Monday and reports say she had been stabbed.

On Monday night, police said the suspect in Toronto's 18th homicide of the year may be driving to Montreal in a burnt orange Kia Rio. Early yesterday, police were called by a woman claiming to be a friend of the suspect, saying he ditched the vehicle at a north-end gas station.

Local media also says the woman told police she had taken the suspect, identified as 39-year-old Patrick Kirk Barrett, to the Oshawa area.

Barrett is described as black and six foot one with a medium build.

Critic slams plan to develop Pickering headwaters land

ENVIRONMENT Building on watershed and prime agricultural land in northeast Pickering will have "catastrophic consequences" for the local ecosystem, a Sierra Club environmentalist is warning.

Pollution and flooding will result if Durham Region's plan to develop the headwaters of Carruthers Creek goes ahead, Dan McDermott told reporters yesterday at the marsh off Audley Road S. in Ajax. He is among a group of critics, including Ajax Mayor Steve Parish, working to change the region's mind about converting 3,000 hectares of farmland, including 1,200 hectares in Pickering, to employment and residential use.

The Sierra Club's research shows that "poorly planned infrastructure causes flooding," McDermott said in releasing its Floods or Food report.

Summits' costs need second look: McGuinty

$1.2B price tag called deterrent

Premier Dalton McGuinty is balking at the $1.2-billion price tag for the upcoming G8 and G20 summits, warning it will scare off other countries from hosting future meetings of world leaders.

McGuinty

Everyone should work together to figure out a way to minimize the costs — as well as the "interference" and "intrusiveness" — of the security measures in Toronto, where the G20 summit is being held at the end of June, the Liberal leader said yesterday.

"A billion dollars is a lot of money, and I don't know if it really has to be a billion dollars," McGuinty said, echoing the concerns of his federal cousins.

"And I hope that the federal government is giving this a second look to see if there's not some way possible for us to ensure that we host a good event, a safe event, without it costing so much money."

Most Canadians agree that the country should occasionally play host for world leaders, he added.

"But at the same time, we'd better find a way to do it that's less costly," McGuinty said. "Otherwise, it's going to be hard for any country anywhere to say, 'Yeah, sure, we welcome these folks' because it's a significant cost."

Federal ministers argue that the ballooning summit costs are necessary to ensure the events are secure, pointing out that it's the first time a country has hosted two summits back to back. THE CANADIAN PRESS

G20 security Street sweep

DAVID COOPER/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Contract workers remove litter containers from Bay Street, south of King Street, yesterday in preparation for the G20 summit coming later this month. The bolts that anchor the bins to the sidewalk had to be ground off flat so people wouldn't trip on them.

PMO nixes Martin's bid to expand G20 agenda

SUMMIT The Prime Minister's Office is rejecting a call from Paul Martin to expand the agenda of the G20 summit to include climate change and poverty.

The former prime minister says Ottawa has a responsibility to put global warming and poverty at the top of the G20 agenda because they threaten the stability of the world just as much as economics.

But the economic challenges are so great right now that they require focus, without distraction, said Prime Minister Stephen Harper's spokesman, Andrew MacDougall.

"The situation is still such in the global economy that leaders' attention really needs to be focused here," MacDougall said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Smile! There's a camera on you

DOWNTOWN It will be hard to find a spot in downtown Toronto that's not in view of a security camera.

Police say the installation of nearly 70 more security cameras in preparation for the G20 summit is complete. The cameras are in addition to 18 police security cameras already in place downtown.

The new cameras will support the G20 security measures, say police, and will be monitored during the meeting of world leaders at the end of June.

The additional security cameras will be removed at the end of the summit. The camera locations are clearly marked, say police. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Firing good for morale: Natynczyk

Canada's top general predicts the firing of the country's ground commander in Afghanistan will reinforce the morale of soldiers in Kandahar, rather than detract from it. Gen. Walter Natynczyk, left, the chief of Defence staff, said yesterday the sacking of Brig.-Gen. Dan Menard over an alleged tryst with a subordinate demonstrated that everyone in the military is held to the same high standard.

'Just a regular bar of soap'

CURIOSITY A closer look at a bar of swastika-engraved soap purportedly from the Second World War has confirmed it is not made of human remains.

Analysis performed by a laboratory in southern Ontario specializing in older items reveals the soap tested negative for human or animal DNA, Montreal police said yesterday.

"The results were negative and the conclusion is clear: no detectable quantity of DNA was found to be present within the bar of soap," Insp. Paul Chablo said. "It's just a regular bar of soap."

Chablo said police investigated following a complaint and amid rumours the soap may have been made of human fat from Holocaust victims.

There have been stories over the years that the Nazis produced soap from the victims of the Holocaust, but the allegations have been debunked by historians and scientists.

This latest bar of soap was seized from a Montreal curiosity shop a few months ago following a media frenzy. The storeowner said he bought it from a former soldier and that it was from Poland circa 1940.

Canada's rights rep 'eroded': Watchdog

A leading international rights watchdog has told the Harper government to include abortion in its G8 maternal health initiative while adding the caution that Canada's global reputation on human rights has eroded.

A top official with New York-based Human Rights Watch raised the controversial abortion stance with one of Canada's senior organizers of the June 25-26 G8 leaders' summit in a meeting earlier this week at the Foreign Affairs Department.

"It's important that maternal health is being raised at the G8. This is long overdue," Phil Robertson, the deputy director of the Asia division of Human Rights Watch said yesterday.

Robertson said Canada's international reputation may be taking a beating across the globe.

"Canada is viewed in the international community as a country that cares about human rights," he said. "However, now there is some concern that those human rights standards have — the internal core of international policy of Canada, which includes rights policy — that human rights element is starting to be eroded."

"There is some concern that ... the internal core of international policy of Canada, which includes rights policy ... is starting to be eroded."

The Conservative government insists it can offer a full menu of assistance to help kids and mothers in poor nations without funding abortion.

News in brief

THAILAND Canada has lifted a warning against non-essential travel to strife-torn Thailand, but it's still urging visitors to "exercise a high degree of caution" if they choose to go. The Foreign Affairs Department notes that a state of emergency still exists in Bangkok and 23 Thai provinces after more than two months of political demonstrations and lethal violence. It says the state of emergency can affect civil liberties and may include searches, checkpoints, curfews, and other restrictions.

Man charged in stabbing of Calgary RCMP officer

ATTACK A man who allegedly ambushed an RCMP officer, stabbing him repeatedly in an interview room at the headquarters of Alberta's police investigative unit, is facing a total of 11 charges including attempted murder.

Lee Christopher Monrose was also charged yesterday with aggravated assault, three counts of assaulting a police officer, assault causing bodily harm and assault with a weapon.

Sgt. Andrew Johnson was critically injured after a man showed up unexpectedly Tuesday morning at the Calgary offices of the Alberta Serious Incident Response Team.

Police say Johnson, an investigator with the team who was unarmed and not in uniform, took the man into an interview room for an informal chat.

Police allege the man grew increasingly agitated and within minutes pulled a knife, stabbing Johnson three times in the upper body. A Calgary police officer also working for the team was slashed in the hand after he rushed in to help his colleague.

Johnson was upgraded to good condition following surgery, while the other officer was released after being treated.

Monrose was involved with ASIRT because he was shot in the head by Calgary police last November after allegedly ramming a police cruiser with his car.

Charest won't fight the Supreme Court

The Quebec government has refused to use the Constitution's notwithstanding clause to limit English-language school rights despite pressure from the opposition.

In doing so, Jean Charest's Liberal government is declining to follow the historic precedent set in the 1980s by his Liberal predecessor Robert Bourassa. When the Supreme Court of Canada struck down part of Quebec's language sign law in 1989, Bourassa invoked a rarely used article in the Constitution that allows governments to override minority rights.

The move triggered a national uproar, caused several Anglo ministers to quit his cabinet, and poured fuel on an already fiery constitutional debate at the time.

Faced with a similar dilemma, Charest announced yesterday that he was taking a different path.

In response to a Supreme Court decision, his government introduced legislation that would allow some non-anglophones to attend English public school.

"To protect our language we don't need to suspend the rights of others," Charest said during a raucous debate in the legislature yesterday.

"On the contrary, we do it because we believe in it."

The opposition Parti Québécois expressed outrage over the decision. It attempted unsuccessfully to block the tabling of the government's Bill 104.

The bill would allow wealthier French-speaking and immigrant families to get around Quebec's language law, which typically bars them from sending children to English public school.

Harper to talk bank tax with Euro leaders

DIPLOMACY Prime Minister Stephen Harper headed to Europe yesterday and separate meetings with British and French leaders.

Harper will meet newly-elected British PM David Cameron in London today, then with French President Nicolas Sarkozy tomorrow.

Harper is expected to use the meetings to discuss his crusade against a bank tax.

Some of Harper's cabinet ministers have travelled around the world recently to campaign against such a tax.

The prime minister has repeatedly used the issue to draw attention to the relative strength of Canada's economy and to the stability of this country's banking sector.

He will also likely use his meetings with Cameron and Sarkozy to discuss other economic issues ahead of G8 and G20 summits that Canada will host later this month.

Commons chaos

A chaotic Commons committee disintegrated yesterday into angry insults and bitter recriminations during a battle between a Conservative cabinet minister and Liberal MPs.

The dispute was ostensibly about the Conservative government's decision to block its ministerial staff from testifying before parliamentary committees.

By the time Transport Minister John Baird had finished questioning the acumen of the Liberal chairwoman of the committee and another Liberal MP accused Baird of trying to badger and strong-arm committee members it was clear that the session was much more a reflection of the toxic atmosphere in this minority Parliament.

"Are you trying to intimidate me Mr. Baird because I'll put myself up against your intimidation factors. Don't try to intimidate me, ever!" Liberal MP Siobhan Coady told Baird in one vitriolic exchange.

Baird, Natural Resources Minister Christian Paradis and junior science minister Gary Goodyear had arrived without invitation at the Government Operations committee in the place of staff who had been called.

MPs are studying allegations that former Tory MP Rahim Jaffer had illegally lobbied officials, some of whom treated his inquiries as a priority. Jaffer had denied any wrongdoing.

Paradis and Goodyear had previously ignored requests to appear at the same committee.

Can You Make Room?

"Cat overpopulation is a major problem in Toronto," says Mary Lou Leiher. "So cat lovers, we've got the pet for you. Male or female; any age, colour, or personality. Call Toronto Animal Services (TAS) today."

As a TAS supervisor, Mary Lou has witnessed thousands of successful cat adoptions. She's seen thousands of dogs, hamsters, rats, rabbits and birds find happy homes as well. The key is matching animal to owner. "Pet adoption isn't a 'pass-fail' process," Mary Lou explains. "But we interview all potential pet owners to ensure they're prepared for the responsibility. It's best to think ahead."

Thinking ahead includes spaying or neutering one's pet, which reduces Toronto's stray population and increases a TAS animal's chances of adoption. Those adoptions aren't free, but the fee covers a veterinary health check, sterilization, microchip implantation, and rabies vaccination. It's the best deal out there, not just for animals, but for owners, too.

Quebec police raid drug ring

Quebec provincial police say they have taken down a drug trafficking network that operated south of Quebec City. Police allege the network had been active for at least two years and sold multiple kilograms of cocaine and methamphetamine each month, mainly in the Beauce region. THE CANADIAN PRESS

625 taken in by 'emergency scam'

One of the more lucrative scams that's defrauding Canadians these days is known as either the emergency scam or grandparent scam, which has victimized at least 625 people since the start of the year with $2.1 million in losses.

And those numbers probably represent just a tiny percentage of all the victimized Canadians and the money they've lost, authorities say. Victims receive a frantic call or email that appears to be coming from a family member or friend, pleading for urgent help in the form of a money transfer. While the RCMP's logs suggest that four or five people report being scammed every day, Staff Sgt. Paul Proulx believes far more victims never come forward.

"We estimate we only get maybe one to five per cent of all the actual victims," Proulx said.

It's also called the grandparent scam because when conducted by phone, the elderly are the most frequent victims.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Electronic fraud

- The email version of the scam has also been making the rounds for the last six to eight months and represents the evolution of intelligent spam with social engineering, say experts.

Experts studying drug cartels say most of the money spent or stashed

Financial experts studying Mexico's drug cartel proceeds say less than half the money smuggled out of the U.S. each year ends up in a bank. They say the rest is either stashed or directly spent in Mexico. Estimates say between $19 billion and $29 billion are smuggled out of the U.S. each year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Castro chimes in on Obama's problems

Fidel Castro speculated yesterday that a nuclear strike on Iran might help U.S. President Barack Obama win a second term in the White House and also suggested the United States could attack North Korea. The former leader of Cuba, who has not been seen in public for nearly four years, also portrayed Obama as a victim of fantasies planted in his mind by sinister advisers. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bloodbath in Britain

Dozen killed as cabbie goes on shooting rampage

A taxi driver drove his vehicle on a shooting spree across a tranquil stretch of northwest England yesterday, methodically killing 12 people and wounding 25 others before turning the gun on himself, officials said.

The rampage in the county of Cumbria was Britain's deadliest mass shooting since 1996 and it jolted a country where handguns are banned and multiple shootings rare. The body of the suspected gunman, 52-year-old Derrick Bird, was found in woods near Boot, a hamlet popular with hikers and vacationers in England's hilly, scenic Lake District. Police said two weapons were recovered from the scene. Eight of the wounded were in hospital, with three of them in critical condition. Queen Elizabeth II, who rarely issues statements responding to the news, said she shared in "the grief and horror of the whole country" and passed on her sympathy to the families of the victims.

Bird

Peter Leder, a taxi driver who knew Bird, said he had seen the gunman Tuesday and didn't notice anything that was obviously amiss. But he was struck by Bird's departing words.

"When he left he said, 'See you Peter, but I won't see you again,'" Leder told Channel 4 News.

The first shootings were reported in the coastal town of Whitehaven, about 560 kilometres northwest of London. Witnesses said the dead there included two of Bird's fellow cabbies.

Police warned residents to stay indoors as they tracked the gunman's progress across the county.

Police officers attend the scene following one of the shootings in Whitehaven, England, yesterday.

Witnesses described seeing the gunman driving around shooting from the window of his car. Victims died in Seascale and Egremont, near Whitehaven, and in Gosforth, where a farmer's son was shot dead in a field. Workers at the nearby Sellafield nuclear processing plant were ordered to stay inside while the gunman was on the loose.

Police said there were 30 separate crime scenes. Many bodies remained on the ground late yesterday, covered with sheets, awaiting the region's small and overstretched force of forensic officers. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Taliban attack interrupts Afghan peace conference

KABUL The thump of rockets and the rattle of gunfire punctuated Afghan President Hamid Karzai's speech opening a national conference yesterday where delegates were divided over whether to negotiate peace with Taliban leaders to end nearly nine years of war.

Taliban fighters wearing suicide vests fired at the tent holding some 1,500 dignitaries, lawmakers and civil society activists, triggering a battle with security forces that killed at least two militants. Three civilians were wounded.

One rocket landed with a thud about 100 metres from the tent and kicked up smoke. Karzai brushed off the interruption, about 10 minutes into his address, and urged fighters from the Taliban and another major insurgent group, Hizb-i-Islami, to lay down their arms. "My dear Taliban, you are welcome in your own soil. Do not hurt this country, and don't destroy or kill yourselves," Karzai said, emphasizing that more fighting would only prevent the withdrawal of international forces from Afghanistan.

"Make peace with me and there will be no need for foreigners here," Karzai said in the nationally televised speech. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

No foreign troops

- The attack underscored the Taliban's opposition to what they have dubbed as a "phoney reconciliation process" stacked with Karzai's supporters. They insist they will not negotiate until all foreign troops leave the country.

Iran accuses IAEA of false reporting

NUCLEAR A senior Iranian envoy accused the International Atomic Energy Agency yesterday of false reporting in saying that inspectors probing a lab for suspected nuclear experiments found some equipment removed.

Ali Ashgar Soltanieh declined a direct answer when asked if he was blaming the agency for a mistake or if he was suggesting another reason for the alleged false finding. But Soltanieh, Iran's chief IAEA delegate, said his country would be asking for a formal correction. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

News in brief

NEW YORK The last of seven teenagers implicated in the hate crime killing of an Ecuadorean immigrant has pleaded guilty. Anthony Hartford's plea yesterday to gang assault and other charges closes the prosecution phase of a case that attracted international headlines. It prompted an ongoing U.S. Justice Department probe of police responses to bias crimes. The 18-year-old admitted being with a group that targeted Hispanics for violence in November 2008. Their attacks culminated in the killing of immigrant Marcelo Lucero. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UN Human Rights Council condemns Israel

Israel drops plans to prosecute activists

In an attempt to limit the diplomatic damage from its deadly raid on a Gaza-bound aid flotilla, Israel dropped plans yesterday to prosecute dozens of pro-Palestinian activists, opting instead to deport them all immediately.

The stunning reversal came as Israel faced increasingly sharp international condemnation for Monday's high-seas raid that ended when Israeli commandos killed nine activists.

The outcry included accusations of war crimes and a decision by Nicaragua to break diplomatic relations with Israel over the raid.

But Israeli officials said the decision not to prosecute any of the activists — despite suspicions that they were sent to attack Israeli forces on the ship — was primarily an attempt to control the damage to Israel's relations with Turkey, an unofficial sponsor of the flotilla.

Israel is anxious to patch up ties with Turkey because it is the Jewish state's most important Muslim ally.

At least four of the nine killed were Turkish and the ship Israel attacked was Turkish. Israel ordered families of its diplomats out of that country a day after Ankara branded the raid a "massacre."

Turkish lawmakers continued to express their outrage yesterday, calling on their government to review its political, military and economic ties with Israel.

Gaza Strip
Aspects of blockade

- When: Israel and Egypt imposed the blockade after the Islamic militant Hamas violently overran the Gaza Strip in June 2007.
- Why: Israel considers Hamas a terror group responsible for firing thousands of rockets at Israel and carrying out dozens of suicide terror attacks.
- Goal: Keeping weaponry away from Hamas. Also, Israel expected that hardship caused by the blockade would weaken support for Hamas among the people of Gaza.
- What's allowed in: Israel transfers an average of 15,000 tons of humanitarian supplies a week into Gaza, including basic food, clothing, footwear and limited quantities of building supplies.
- What's banned: Weapons and explosives; cement, iron and steel, fertilizer and other products.

BP overcomes oil spill hurdle

Plan to contain leak hit snag when saw got stuck in pipe

The BP oil slick drifted perilously close to the Florida Panhandle's famous sugar-white beaches yesterday as a risky gambit to contain the leak by shearing off the well pipe ran into trouble a mile under the sea when the diamond-tipped saw became stuck.

BP says it was about halfway done slicing through the pipe when the diamond-tipped saw snagged.

The company said yesterday night it took 12 hours to free the saw and preparations were underway to resume cutting.

The plan is to fit a cap on the blown-out well at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico to capture most of the spewing oil; the twisted, broken pipe had to be sliced first to allow a snug fit.

"I don't think the issue is whether or not we can make the second cut. It's about how fine we can make it, how smooth we can make it," said U.S. Coast Guard Admiral Thad Allen.

"I don't think the issue is whether or not we can make the second cut. It's about how fine we can make it."
U.S. Coast Guard Admiral Thad Allen

As the edge of the slick drifted within seven miles of Pensacola's beaches, emergency workers rushed to link the last in a miles-long chain of booms designed to fend off the oil. They were stymied by thunderstorms and wind before the weather cleared in the afternoon.

India V for victory

Indian Railway Minister and Trinamool Congress party Leader Mamata Banerjee displays the victory sign yesterday at the entrance of her home after her party's win in the municipal elections in Calcutta, India. After a landslide victory in West Bengal state, Banerjee yesterday demanded immediate state elections, saying Left Front Major Communist Party of India (Marxist) has lost all right to continue in power, according to a news agency.

5-year-old boy locked in car in hot weather dies

CYPRUS Cypriot police say a five-year-old boy died in a locked car in hot weather after his surgeon father was called away for an emergency operation.

Police said yesterday the child had stayed in the parked car for at least nine hours. Temperatures outside were up to 32 C.

The boy died Tuesday in the town of Larnaca, outside the private clinic where his father works.

Police say the 40-year-old surgeon was driving the boy to school but was sidetracked by an emergency call and spent the day in surgery. He remembered the boy after his wife called to ask where the child was.

An autopsy ruled out heatstroke or suffocation as the cause of death, but found the boy had a heart defect.

No charges have been filed. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Japanese PM steps down

POLITICS The hasty departure of Prime Minister Yukio Hatoyama after only eight months in office could paralyze Japanese politics or force the creation of a new ruling coalition, analysts said yesterday, with key elections looming and the battle over the future of a major U.S. military base still unresolved.

Yukio Hatoyama

Hatoyama's Democratic Party, which will name a new chief tomorrow, moved quickly to keep Hatoyama's resignation from creating political chaos.

Hatoyama said he would resign because of a funding scandal and his failure to keep a campaign promise to move Marine Corps Air Station Futenma off the southern island of Okinawa, a flip-flop that infuriated Okinawans and defined Hatoyama for voters as a weak leader unable to stand up to Washington.

Teens relying on rhythm method: Study

Use of unreliable birth control method on the rise among youth, CDC survey finds

A growing number of teen girls in the U.S. say they use the rhythm method for birth control, and more teens also think it's OK for an unmarried female to have a baby, according to a government survey released yesterday.

The report may help explain why the teen pregnancy rate is no longer dropping.

Overall, teenage use of birth control and teen attitudes toward pregnancy have remained about the same since a similar survey was done in 2002.

But there were some notable exceptions in the new survey by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

First, about 17 per cent of sexually experienced teen girls say they had used the rhythm method — timing their sex to avoid fertile days to prevent getting pregnant. That's up from 11 per cent in 2002.

They may have been using another form of birth control at the same time. But the increase is considered worrisome because the rhythm method doesn't work about 25 per cent of the time, said Joyce Abma, the report's lead author. She's a social scientist at the CDC's National Center for Health Statistics.

Top German cleric under investigation

ABUSE German prosecutors are investigating allegations that the country's top Roman Catholic cleric was responsible in the 1980s for hiring a priest known to have sexually abused minors, a spokesman said yesterday.

The investigation of Freiburg Archbishop Robert Zollitsch is based solely on a complaint by a person who claims to have been abused, and the allegations haven't yet been scrutinized, Prosecutor Wolfgang Maier said.

Zollitsch also heads the German Bishops Conference. Archdiocese spokesman Robert Eberle rejected as baseless the allegation that he was an accessory to abuse of minors by omission.

The complaint alleges that, in 1987, Zollitsch — then in charge of human resources at the Freiburg diocese — was responsible for hiring a priest known to have sexually-abused minors. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

News in brief

SWITZERLAND The Swiss Bishops' Conference reports that 104 people have come forward this year as alleged victims of sex abuse by church employees in Switzerland. The country's highest Catholic body says the people reported the abuse between January and May, but most of the allegations date from before 1990.

Hot housing cooling off

The once white hot resale housing market is cooling significantly and prices should remain flat the rest of this year and fall in 2011, economists say.

"We've had this immensely powerful sellers' market and ... there could be a very rapid transition so that it now becomes a buyers' market," said Will Dunning of the Canadian Association of Accredited Mortgage Professionals.

The Canadian Real Estate Association yesterday lowered its 2010 national forecast for resale transactions following a weaker than anticipated start to the year in Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta.

Ontario sales

- Ontario's projected number of home sales for 2010 has been reduced by 8,300 to 215,400, which would still be up 10 per cent from last year's 195,840.

CREA also revised its projected housing price increases for this year, saying the increase is expected to be just 1.6 per cent over 2009. It predicted that by 2011, the national average housing price is expected to decline by 1.5 per cent, driven down by an easing of the growth in sales in Ontario and B.C. in the first half of 2010.

Bombardier warns of layoffs

TRANSPORTATION Quebec's railway manufacturing industry and thousands of jobs are threatened if Bombardier is unable to secure a multibillion-dollar contract to modernize Montreal Metro's fleet of subway cars, the manufacturer said yesterday.

Bombardier Transportation president Andre Navarri said at a news conference after Bombardier's annual meeting that 12,000 jobs, including more than 1,500 direct employees at Bombardier and French train maker Alstom, are relying on the contract.

He denied that Bombardier was issuing a threat: Just clearly stating the implications of a misstep by decision-makers.

The Montreal-based aircraft and rail manufacturer said it earned $153 million US in the first quarter.

Bombardier's Quebec facilities have relied on exports to the U.S. and with the U.S. economy weakened, it needs the Quebec contract to keep the operations running fully.

The Societe de transport de Montreal seemed on track to award the contract to the Bombardier and Alstom joint venture, but decided to launch an international tender call after increasing the size of the order from the original 340 cars.

Business in brief

MELTDOWN Billionaire investor Warren Buffett yesterday defended credit rating agencies that gave overly positive grades to mortgage-related investments before the housing bust. He said the agencies were among many who missed warning signs of the crisis. "They made the wrong call," he said. He counted himself among those who failed to foresee the collapse of what he called the "greatest bubble" he had ever seen.

CHILI - the red hot way of losing weight!

Eating chili can make you lose weight by speeding up your metabolism and burning fat, scientists have found. Researchers show that heat generated by the spicy food oxidizes layers of fat as well as increases metabolism.

Now those with sensitive taste buds can also benefit from peppers without having to endure the stinging aftertaste. An equivalent of the main chili ingredient, capsaicin, has been found in a non-spicy variety. This means that we can gain the fat burning effect of chili without the risk of stinging our taste buds or stomachs. This non-spicy version of chili is now found in supplement form.

Clinically proven to burn fat!

Researchers at the University of California studied the effects of chili on the diet after becoming intrigued at the manner in which the spicy fruit makes those who eat them sweat. They fed 34 men and women a low-calorie diet, supplemented with either non-hot version of pepper or placebo pills.

They found that levels of energy expended by those given the highest amounts of capsaicin were almost double those of the subjects who had been given the placebo.

Green tea and chili together is the strongest combination for fat burning

The current best selling natural ingredient for fat loss is green tea. Now studies show that chili and green tea together complement each other and burn more fat than either one alone. Scandinavian manufacturer New Nordic has recently launched their natural product Chili Burn in Canada. The product is based on this research and further adds ginger and dill in the composition. Chili Burn, which is now the no.1 fat burning supplement in Scandinavia, is available in Canada at Shoppers Drug Mart, Loblaws/Superstores/Extra Foods, GNC, and other participating health food stores and pharmacies.

U.S. iPhone, iPad users face data caps

AT&T Inc. will stop letting new customers sign up for its unlimited Internet data plan for smartphones and iPads, hoping to ease congestion on its network by charging the people who use the most data more.

The move comes just in time for the expected unveiling of Apple Inc.'s new iPhone next week.

Current subscribers will be able to keep their $30 US-per-month unlimited plans, even if they renew their contracts. But starting Monday, new customers will have to choose one of two new data plans for all smartphones, including iPhones and BlackBerrys.

With the change, AT&T is adopting a carrot-and-stick approach to assuage the data congestion on its network, which has been a source of complaints, especially in cities such as New York and San Francisco, which are thick with iPhone users.

Subscribers who use little data or learn to limit their consumption will pay slightly less every month than they do now, while heavy users will be dinged with extra consumption fees.

Analysts said they expect the move to be quickly followed by other phone companies, which should be eager to avoid the trap of unlimited-use data plans. With no caps on consumption, data use could swamp wireless networks while revenue for the operators remains flat.

Small coffee to cost more at Second Cup

Coffee lovers will start paying a little more at Second Cup coffee shops later this year when the company increases the price of a small cup of brewed coffee by a nickel.

Chief executive Stacey Mowbray said yesterday that the largest Canadian-owned specialty coffee shop operator plans to impose the price increase sometime in the fall, though a specific timeline hasn't been announced.

Prices for other brewed coffee cup sizes are expected to remain steady, as will the prices of its other drinks, Mowbray added.

"We have really held tight and our overall pricing has been less than a one per cent increase across the country in the last 18 months," she said after the Second Cup Income Fund annual meeting in Toronto.

It's the first time Second Cup has increased the price of its brewed coffee in more than a year, Mowbray said, even while some of its biggest competitors inched up their own menu prices last fall.

Tim Hortons Inc. and Starbucks both increased the cost of a cup of coffee and some baked goods as they contended with higher costs for running their stores.

Tim Hortons raised the price of coffee in certain regions, mostly by five cents a cup.

Units of the Second Cup fund gained three cents to close yesterday at $7.30 on the Toronto Stock Exchange. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Revenue for the three months ended April 30 was $21.3 million, up from $17.4 million in the first quarter of fiscal 2010.

The increased revenue included $2.6 million from Portus and Imanet.

Without that, Descartes revenue would have been $18.7 million — up 7.4 per cent from a year earlier. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Giroux gives Flyers OT win

(Chicago leads series 2-1)

Blackhawks 3 Flyers 4 (OT)

Twice, the Philadelphia Flyers needed video replay to decide if a goal counted.

One did, one didn't.

Claude Giroux didn't need the officials to check his winner.

Giroux scored 5:59 into overtime to give the Flyers a 4-3 overtime victory over Chicago in Game 3 of the Stanley Cup finals last night, cutting the Blackhawks' series lead to 2-1.

Game 4 is Friday night in Philadelphia.

Giroux scored on a deflection off Matt Carle's pass, beating Antti Niemi to decide the third straight one-goal game in the series.

The Blackhawks, trying to win their first Stanley Cup title since 1961, snapped a seven-game winning streak and a seven-game road winning streak.

Giroux ended the game moments after Simon Gagne thought he scored the winner, only to have replay officials rule the puck didn't cross the goal line.

The game kept going — but not for long.

It was the second time replay was needed to determine a Flyers' goal. They went 1 for 2 — but, oh, how huge that one was for the Flyers in their first Stanley Cup home game since 1997. Scott Hartnell had a no-goal overturned by replay to spark the Flyers to their first finals win since 1987. Danny Briere and Ville Leino also scored for the Flyers, helping them win a game they desperately needed to avoid their second 3-0 hole of the playoffs. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Another day, another ninth-inning collapse for Jays

MLB RESULTS

Rays 7 Blue Jays 3

Carl Crawford hit a grand slam in the ninth inning and the Toronto Blue Jays suffered a late collapse for the second straight night, losing 7-3 to the Tampa Bay Rays yesterday in the rubber match of a three-game series.

Crawford's third career grand slam came against reliever Scott Downs and capped the Rays' six-run ninth.

The Jays led 2-1 heading into the final inning.

Reid Brignac's double scored the go-ahead run with one out to spell the end for Toronto starter Shaun Marcum (5-2), who allowed 10 hits and no walks in 8⅓ innings. He was charged with five runs, four earned, by the time the bullpen was finished.

The Rays, who scored four runs in the ninth to win 7-6 on Tuesday, got eight innings from starter David Price (8-2), who allowed nine hits and two unearned runs. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Perfection denied

• Armando Galarraga of the Detroit Tigers lost his bid for a perfect game last night with two outs in the ninth inning on a call that first base umpire Jim Joyce later admitted he blew. First baseman Miguel Cabrera cleanly fielded Jason Donald's grounder to his right and made an accurate throw to Galarraga covering the bag. The ball was there in time, and fans were ready to celebrate until Joyce signalled safe.

Bryant, Pierce aiming for banner years

NBA When Kobe Bryant joined the Lakers and Paul Pierce landed with the Celtics in the late 1990s, they both learned most of what they needed to know about their franchises' histories and expectations simply by looking at the forests of fabric high above the court.

These teams only hang banners for championships, and they're usually in big groups.

Multiple titles are the only metric of success, the only validation still interesting to Bryant and Pierce. Bryant is trying to accomplish the rarest of NBA feats for the second time in his career, while Pierce's Celtics get their first chance when the NBA finals begin tonight at Staples Center.

"It's going to mean everything for my career because a lot of guys have won one, and not many have won a couple," Pierce said yesterday before Boston practised at Staples Center.

Pro basketball's most successful franchises are together in the NBA finals for the second time in three years and the 12th time overall. These teams will have won 33 of the league's 64 titles when they finish a potentially fascinating series with plenty of modern subplots.

"We're always focused on winning a championship," Bryant said. "And when you do it, you want to do it again and again." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Quarterback Cleo Lemon sets up to throw a pass during the Toronto Argonauts practice yesterday in Mississauga.

Quintet of QBs given ample opportunity

Cleo Lemon readily admits he stepped into a situation yesterday afternoon he's never seen before.

But as one of five untried Canadian Football League quarterbacks competing for a job with the Toronto Argonauts, he says he couldn't be any happier.

"I've never, ever seen this before," said the 30-year-old National Football League journeyman after a rain-soaked 90-minute workout on the opening day of rookie camp at Mississauga's Huron Park. "And that was the intriguing part of this, the fact that you can come up here and compete. In professional sports, that's not always the case.

"To have that kind of opportunity, I think it's something special."

Many consider Lemon the favourite to line up behind centre when the season starts July 1, mainly because of his NFL experience and CFL-style mobility. He gave them another reason to think so yesterday when he said the Argo offence should take advantage of that.

"When everybody's spread out, and that's what we're going to do this year, that will open up running lanes for the quarterback," he said. "I can take advantage of that."

But head coach Jim Barker says it's way too early to start assessing his stable of arms.

"We're looking for that one person to step forward, but it's not going to happen in rookie camp," he said.

But Barker did say that his first look at the quintet in action will help him sleep easy.

"The first time seeing live bodies, I thought they did a great job," he said. "I thought the quarterbacks all did some things very well and all did some things pretty poorly."

All showed some flashes of brilliance. Lemon hit Simon Fraser product Spencer Watt with a 25-yard laser and showed his speed and mobility after escaping the rush.

Former Buffalo Bills backup Gibran Hamdan, Canadian Danny Brannagan, former Saskatchewan third-stringer Dalton Bell and ex-NFLer Ken Dorsey also looked good at times.

Sports in brief

BASKETBALL While Mike Krzyzewski is flattered by all the reports linking him to the NBA, he insists he's not leaving Duke. Krzyzewski admitted yesterday that "it's more of a compliment — it's not an insult" to hear his name mentioned for several NBA coaching vacancies. But he also reaffirmed what he's been saying for years, every time those rumours pop up: He isn't going anywhere.

NFL Minnesota coach Brad Childress says he is not concerned with the trash-talking tweets going on between Vikings tight end Visanthe Shiancoe and Saints safety Darren Sharper. Shiancoe and Sharper have been sniping back and forth on Twitter for the better part of two weeks, a feud that started when Sharper implied New Orleans would go after Brett Favre's surgically repaired ankle in the season opener in September.

BASKETBALL Chris Rudge says it's only speculation at this point, but according to a CFL source, the former Canadian Olympic Committee CEO is expected to head up the 2012 Toronto Grey Cup organizing group. The CFL hasn't announced the 2012 host city but Toronto is generally regarded as the top candidate. The 2010 Grey Cup will be held in Edmonton, with the 2011 contest slated for Vancouver.

Serena Williams waves as she leaves the court after being defeated by Samantha Stosur during a quarter-final match at the French Open in Paris yesterday.

Serena joins list of Stosur's upsets

TENNIS Top-ranked Serena Williams was eliminated in the French Open quarter-finals yesterday, squandering a match point and losing to Australian spoiler Samantha Stosur, 6-2, 6-7 (2), 8-6.

A 12-time Grand Slam champion, Williams won her only French Open title in 2002 and hasn't been to the semifinals since 2003.

"I guess it's a redundant story with me," she said. "It was my match, and I lost it."

The upset was the second in a row for the No. 7-seeded Stosur, and surprises keep coming at Roland Garros.

Four-time champion Rafael Nadal defied the trend, beating No. 19 Nicolas Almagro 7-6 (2), 7-6 (3), 6-4 in an all-Spanish quarter-final. But No. 3 Novak Djokovic lost to Jurgen Melzer, who earned his first Grand Slam semifinal berth at age 29 by rallying to win 3-6, 2-6, 6-2, 7-6 (3), 6-4.

On Monday, Stosur ended four-time champion Justine Henin's Roland Garros winning streak at 24 matches in the fourth round. On Tuesday, top-ranked Roger Federer lost to Robin Soderling.

Then Williams made her exit, with stretches of brilliant tennis by Stosur hastening the departure. The Australian, long regarded as a doubles specialist, used her forceful forehand to build a lead, winning 17 consecutive points during one stretch.

Williams mounted one of her patented comebacks, and as the tension built in an error-filled third set, she needed only one point in the 10th game for the victory.

Her forehand sailed an inch long.

That gave Stosur a chance to regain her early form. She hit consecutive cross-court winners to break for a 7-6 lead, then served out the victory, hitting service winners on the final three points.

"I've calmed down a little bit since walking off the court," a smiling Stosur said 90 minutes after the match. "But I'm pretty happy with myself." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Griffey Jr. calls it a career

MLB Ken Griffey Jr. retired last night, ending one of the great careers in baseball history.

Ken Griffey Jr.

The 40-year-old Griffey told the Mariners he was done playing, and manager Don Wakamatsu made the announcement before Seattle faced Minnesota.

"While I feel I am still able to make a contribution on the field and nobody in the Mariners front office has asked me to retire, I told the Mariners when I met with them prior to the 2009 season and was invited back that I will never allow myself to become a distraction," Griffey said in a statement. "I feel that without enough occasional starts to be sharper coming off the bench, my continued presence as a player would be an unfair distraction to my teammates and their success as a team is what the ultimate goal should be," he said.

Griffey was hitting only .184 with no homers and seven RBIs this year and recently went a week without playing. There was a report earlier this season — which Griffey denied — that he had fallen asleep in the clubhouse during a game. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

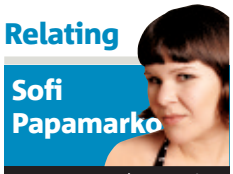
Catching love on the rebound

Relating



Sofi Papamarko

metronews.ca/papamarko

Sometimes the person is right, but the timing is all wrong.

Elizabeth and George met eight years ago.

"I thought he was the most honourable, decent, thoughtful and compassionate guy I'd (ever) met … and that my search was over."

The couple were happy for a while, but due to conflicting schedules and the fact that they were in different places in their lives, the relationship ended. Elizabeth had other serious relationships, but always compared them to her ex.

Fast forward to 2010. George sends Elizabeth a Facebook friendship request and his phone number. When she calls, he asks her out to dinner. The couple has since reunited and things are going well.

"We are more mature, less afraid and more confident," Elizabeth says. "Dating other people made us realize what we had with each other."

Jimmy Buffett called it Boomerang Love. But we're not talking about that tiresome couple who break up and reconcile every few weeks. (Seriously, get it together!) This is about realizing, years later, that someone you were once with might have been The One.

Shannon and Doug met at a sporting arena where she worked as a hostess. "I was serving him and just thought he was gorgeous," she recalls. "I was like, 'Where's my name tag because I don't remember my name right now.'"

Doug was visiting from an American city, but the two exchanged contact information and eventually began a long-distance relationship.

It worked for a while. And then it didn't.

Shannon distanced herself from Doug and started dating someone else, eventually marrying him. But she was never able to shake the memory of Doug.

"I thought about him on my wedding day," she admits. "Just before I walked out, I wondered what he was doing."

The marriage didn't last. After Shannon filed for divorce, a random email from Doug rekindled their dormant friendship. The pair are now engaged and she's moved her life to be with him.

"He is how people should treat other people in relationships. He's chivalrous, he's respectful and he loves me unconditionally. And he thinks that I'm the most beautiful woman in the whole entire world and I feel that every day."

Life isn't always a Disney princess movie, but sometimes it has a funny way of working itself out.

"Our hearts know what we need," she says. "It just took me a little longer to realize that he was what my heart needed."

News flash: Muslims are sexy and cool

GlobalView

Mona Eltahawy

metronews.ca/globalview

I could not have dreamed up Rima Fakih if I had tried.

When I imagine stereotype-busting Muslim women, they're not usually being crowned the first Muslim and possibly first Arab Miss USA.

I have long fought to give voice to the diversity of Muslim women out there.

Fakih, complete with a bikini that had even me struggling to concentrate, effortlessly embodied all of that.

When Fakih told judges that U.S. health insurance should cover the birth control pill, she had already won this feminist's heart.

Lebanese President Michel Suleiman publicly congratulated Fakih amid reports the two would meet soon.

And not one of her relatives has tried to honour kill her?

Who allowed the silent and invisible women an opinion — and sexy legs — dammit!

I am allergic to pageants, but I am relieved to see a different type of Muslim woman in the news.

I had barely recovered from news of Rima the Beauty Queen when I was dumbstruck by news that Aziz Ansari — an American-Muslim comedian — was going to host the MTV Movie Awards Sunday.

As MC of the awards he will effectively become Mr. Pop USA, following in the footsteps of Mike Myers, Sarah Silverman and Ben Stiller.

Muslims are sexy AND cool now?

Ever since 9/11, Muslims have been cornered into apologizing and explaining, endlessly, "Why do they hate us? Is it our freedoms?"

Well, surely Fakih and Ansari are being hailed as the embodiment of American freedom?

According to the zany paranoia of the right wing, Fakih's victory was the latest "proof" that Muslims are on the receiving end of "affirmative action" and of a "politically correct Islam-opandering climate."

I'll believe that when there's a Muslim in the White House.

The birthplace of Toronto

St. Lawrence
Spaces & Places

RAFAEL BRUSILOW
for Metro Canada

St. Lawrence has come a long way from its humble beginnings in the late 1700s, yet to this day it is still the heart and soul of Toronto.

The neighbourhood, which lies just south of the Queen Street East as it passes Yonge Street, is like a microcosm of the city, bustling with artistic and mercantile energy and bringing together cultures and demographics alike.

The St. Lawrence Market proves to be a gourmand's delight with a seemingly endless array of open-style fresh food stalls and shops on two levels drawing in throngs of shoppers from even outside of the GTA.

Historic buildings abound and the vibe is definitively more laid-back than could ever be expected in the belly of a downtown metropolis.

Average property value: $318,940 Rent: $1,070

Homes you'll see: Primarily condos throughout the area with older ones along Front and Wellington streets and newer ones along Richmond and Adelaide streets. Most residential buildings are built after the 1960s and 1970s.

Bargain spot: Prices are generally highest closer to the market and go down as you get further away from it. The Esplanade has several older but still attractive condo buildings that tend to be priced lower that the area's average.

Landmarks: The St. Lawrence Market is the cornerstone of the area, pulsating with energy on Saturdays when farmers roll in with fresh goods and drawing tourists and locals alike throughout the week — enjoy free Wi-Fi service in the South Market building. St. James Park between Adelaide and King just west of Jarvis is packed in the summer with picnickers and stragglers looking for some shade. The wedge-shaped Gooderham Building (49 Wellington St. E.) is the oldest Flatiron buildings in North America, built five years before the more famous Fuller Building in New York City.

Hot spots: C'est What (67 Front St. E.) features local and in-house brews that will keep you testing out new flavours while Pravda Vodka Bar (44 Wellington St. E.) has the most impressive walk-in vodka freezer you'll ever see and a cool, neo-revolutionary vibe to it — no cover on Friday nights and the place really hops. Epicureans will love La Maquette (111 King St. E.), an elegantly traditional restaurant that fuses Italian and French cooking and is renowned as one of the most romantic dinner spots in the city. Art lovers will be happy to know that the long-developed Sony Centre for the Performing Arts (1 Front St. E.) is scheduled to open Oct. 1.

Getting around: Subway stations at Queen, King and Union with streetcar service along King and Queen streets. GO Train and intercity train service at Union Station.

Final thoughts: Relaxed, historic and full of life, St. Lawrence is not only Toronto's oldest neighbourhood but one of its most inspiring. A place where old world charm mixes with modernity, the area is rightly one of the city's most exciting and attractive to experience. On regular Saturdays in the summer you could be forgiven for thinking the place is perpetually holding some kind of festival, judging by the throngs of people trudging the streets in their flip-flops.

Unplug your home and live off the grid

TOMAS LUNDIN
Metro World News

ALL PHOTOS: METRO WORLD NEWS

What energy crisis?

Niklas and Louise Scott run their dishwasher daily, watch movies on a 72-inch screen and walk on heated floors. But soaring energy prices are no concern for them. In fact, they are not even connected to the grid.

After years of planning and experimenting with solar panels in their previous home, the Swedish couple decided to go all the way last year.

"When we told our friends about it, most of them thought we would fail miserably," Niklas said.

But the self-sufficient house stood ready in September last year. It is built with super insulated, rodent-repellent foam glass from recycled bottles.

Later that year, Sweden's coldest winter for 50 years arrived.

Niklas said it was a perfect test and added: "We made it through and we didn't even have the wind power station up."

The money the couple saved from not connecting to the grid was invested in just over 400 square feet of rooftop solar panels. In the unlikely event of a total solar eclipse combined with a total lack of wind, a room full of batteries will keep everything running for two weeks.

Niklas said: "On a sunny summer day the house will produce 10 times more energy than it needs. I'm thinking of installing air conditioning this summer."

Now he measures every watt that leaves or comes into the house (the family cats Hampus and Razmus each generate 20 watts of energy per hour with their body heat) and plans to harvest water coming down the waterspout with a mini-powerplant that can charge a laptop during a downpour. Niklas is the inventor, but today they are both enthusiasts.

"I fell in love with Niklas because he is just a little bit crazy," Louise said.

The secret to sustainability is to not only produce green electricity, but to keep consumption at a minimum. LED lighting and smart ventilation keeps it at one fifth of that of an average house.

"They say we have an energy crisis, but it's really just a matter of energy waste. We wanted to show that you can live eco-friendly and still have the same level of comfort."

Going green?

- If you're interested in turning your house into a "green home" check out these options:
- Vertical gardens and living walls: See indoor and outdoor garden walls in Green Apple Landscaping's showroom. "Beyond the benefit of having something beautiful and living to look at, the wall acts as a biological filter," said Green Apple owner Peter Solti.

GREEN APPLE LANDSCAPING, 16 NORTHWESTERN AVE., SUITE 200 416-288-1499

- Solar electricity: Solsmart offers full-service, turn-key installations of various solar energy systems. "(Solar panels are) really an investment now because of how the energy is sold back to the grid. It's like having a tenant on the roof that always pays on time," said Solsmart manager Andrew McCormack. SOLSMART ENERGY SOLUTIONS INC. 1159 DUNDAS ST. E., SUITE 157 416-229-2200

PAULINE ANDERSON
for Metro Canada

PHOTOS: NICHOLAS JESTADT/FOR METRO CANADA

For long-time residents Eva Hecht and Rudi Christl, a day in St. Lawrence could mean shopping for some nice decor items at High-Tech, catching a cheap flick at Rainbow Cinema then hitting the The Corner Place for a spicy chicken salad — and that's without even shopping at the massive the St. Lawrence Market.

For avid cyclists, the St. Lawrence Market district is an ideal place to put down roots.

And that's exactly what freelance copy editor Eva Hecht and photographer Rudi Christl did 23 years ago. From their apartment on the Esplanade, they can hop on their bikes and be at Lake Ontario in minutes. From there they can ride waterfront trails east to the Beaches or west to Port Credit. "Last year, we cycled over 2,500 kilometers," says Rudi.

Aside from the proximity of bike trails, the rich history of the area was a major attraction. Old warehouses still stand as does the triangular red-brick flatiron building that dates back to 1891 and houses offices and a pub. The couple has come to enjoy the newer cultural traditions including the annual Buskerfest and Woofstock dog festival.

"We love to be around the fun and the kind of buzz from these festivals," says Eva. The area also has a range of theatrical events from plays at Canadian Stage to the affordable Market Square Rainbow Cinema. "It's a four-minute walk for $4 Tuesdays; it's the cheapest theatre in town," says Eva.

After a flick, the couple may stop at C'est What and choose from a selection of six dozen brews on tap, and then to Le Papillon for a curry crepe. The Corner Place is another favourite spot where Eva is partial to sliders and spicy chicken salad. For Rudi, Betty's on King Street is a preferred place to meet with buddies in the film and advertising industry and enjoy a pint of German Hacker Pschorr beer.

Rudi does the food shopping and the St. Lawrence Market, rated among the world's best public markets, is his first stop. He's sure to pick something up at White House Meats and Domino's bulk foods.

On a rainy afternoon, the couple may stop in at Nicholas Hoare, a rare independent bookstore.

"It's our refuge," says Eva. "It's a classic old bookstore and a great place to just sit and read in a comfortable chair," adds Rudi, who is working on his third photographic book of Toronto.

When the sun's out, the St. Lawrence Sunday Antique Market is buzzing. It's a treasure trove for conscientious shoppers like Eva. Another of her favorite haunts is High Tech where she recently splurged on a brushed aluminum kitchen timer. "The area is a mecca for furniture designers and decorators," she says.

Be playful in the Distillery District

Suite Talk

RAFAEL BRUSILOW
for Metro Canada

Vibrant colour threads throughout the model suite at Gooderham Condominiums at the Distillery, proving that above all, living spaces deserve to be fun.

The Gooderham Condominiums model suite designer calls other model suites 'boring' and has tried to incorporate fun into her design.

The two-bedroom, two-bathroom model suite for Phase III brought to life by designer and architect Ava Janikowski plays with colour and mixed furniture elements to create a strikingly refreshing, unpretentious look.

"The idea was to make the space looked as lived-in as possible. It's interesting in its imperfections and uses of different furniture and different colours. It's supposed to be playful. We should not be afraid of colour because it brings so much joy to our lives," Janikowski said.

Janikowski's open-concept approach maximizes the 1,070 square-foot space with low backs on chairs and sofas and plenty of open shelves for displaying rather than hiding objects. With plenty of white and pastel tones, the space almost glows with possibility and positivity — exactly as Janikowski intended.

"It's meant to be very New Age. The energy flows, it's open and flexible and all about change. You can change the space and use it however you want. We have to encourage change and that's what New Age is all about," Janikowski said.

Creating excitement in the suite was a big goal for Janikowski, something she finds sorely lacking from typical model suite designs. Call her design Ikea-lite for grown-ups and enjoy the European-themed vibe.

"Many model suites are beige and boring and overly perfect, I try to bring in diverse objects and make them work together. It's like being transported to Europe — when we evolve from Ikea it's still good to embrace modernity," Janikowski said.

The suite includes a table, chairs and a side table made from recycled wood from Quebec and a sleek couch and loveseat set whose simplicity does not sacrifice any comfort.

"The couch is very comfortable but it's also very light. It's not overstuffed like traditional comfy couches. It's all about functionality but we should not be afraid to be playful," Janikowski said.

Be green, re-invent, save money

DecorMoment

Persian rugs can really bring a room together, and they can easily recycled and reused when found at a yard or estate sales.

As someone who is always looking for the newest and latest things, I have something to admit: I spend late nights hunting for old furniture online and Saturday mornings visiting yard and estate sales. It's been quite a fruitful pastime and I have furnished most of my house with other's castaways from the past few years; beautiful cast-iron garden furniture, sunburst mirrors, vintage lamps, Persian rugs; all items that are a decorator's dream come true.

It's been a great time for finding treasures; the explosion of home sales means more people moving; in return needing to rid themselves of great stuff. Shopping online at places like Kijiji (kijiji.ca) helps keep my treasure hunting passion alive even when the weather doesn't allow for yard sales.

My latest purchase was a very old, three-hump camelback sofa. It had ornately carved wood legs and was covered in an off-white damask fabric. The fabric was worn from many years of a cat's claws, but other than that in sturdy condition. I liked the sofa because of its curvy shape; a trend that is making a return to furniture. I spoke to my professional upholsterer at InVue and asked if I could have two of the three humps removed, stain the carved legs very dark and re-cover it with an updated fabric to create a modern version of the old classic sofa style. He said everything I wanted was doable, so the sofa is now being re-made, which is a much better option then the sofa ending up at a dump sight.

"The sofa is now being re-made, which is a much better option then the sofa ending up at a dump sight."

There are many stylish refurbishing projects I plan to take on this summer; here's a few on my list:

- Repaint the old wooden dresser that sits in my guest room: I love the size and function, but the shiny wood finish is looking outdated. A light sanding and a easy-spray coat of TKTK (I plan on painting it Kiwi Green for fun) will add punch, colour and freshness to this tired piece. $20 for two cans of spray paint and I'll create a signature furniture piece that the guest room desperately needs. I just might paint the inside of the drawers tangerine orange for a surprise burst of colour.
- Bind an old Persian rug: I purchased an antique 8x10 rug at a yard sale last summer. The edges were tattered, but rug had tons of character, colour and pattern. I want to add a five inch (I have chosen dark navy as the rug has a lot blue in it) ultra suede fabric border. That will clean up the edges and add a modern touch to the rug. My local rug cleaning company will clean and sew on the border at a cost of about $225. Its a great price to pay to have the charm of an old carpet with a modern edge.

Another few weeks and I should have my curvy delight back from the upholsterers. How much will it all cost? I paid $300 for the antique sofa, $450 for fabric and $900 for reupholstering. Could I have purchased a custom-style sofa for $1,650? I bet not.

Create the perfect backyard shed

HomeScape
Sylvia Putz
metronews.ca/homescape

A shed is a shed is a shed, right? Wrong. A shed can be whatever you want it to be.

In a home, you've got to worry about making changes that suit you but may not raise the value of your home. But a shed — well, you can use your creativity and have some fun.

That being said, there are some ideas to keep in mind.

A backyard shed normally blends into the backyard. I think it is loveliest when it is wood or stone, and bedecked with plants, such as vines or climbing plants on a trellis, window boxes, hanging baskets, or planters. A window or two adds charm.

A wood shed with lots of greenery surrounding it — such as vines or climbing plants — is a great bet.

Or, it can be finished to match your home, perhaps using the same type of siding or trim that you've got on your home.

A metal shed, although less aesthetically pleasing, can be painted dark green or a colour that blends into a garden. Painting a mural (say, a sun and moon) is another possibility, as is the notion of attaching stone veneer or thinly-sliced wood to metal shed walls.

If you need to store things in the shed, it's worth going through your shed items and turfing what you don't need. After you do this, you may find you have usable space after all.

If you want to hang out in the space for any length of time, it's definitely worth your while to insulate and use sun-blocking curtains or shades to keep it cool in summer. If you've got power, fans also help. During colder weather, a small heating electric fireplace or a gel-burning fireplace is a lovely and useful addition.

Shed decor ideas

- Hang antique gardening implements over the door or on shed walls.
- Hang birdfeeders and set a birdbath nearby.
- Arrange bunches of dried flowers or vines in hanging baskets or in swaths over windows or around the shed entrance.
- Nail flower boxes under windows and plant cascading flowers.
- Use a trellis and plant climbing plants.
- Use water chains that drip into water barrels.
- Use terra cotta pots or planters set around the shed or along the path to the shed.
- Attach durable art to shed walls, such as mosaic or tile art.

Creature comforts are important too. Comfortable seating with side tables, curtains, a rug, art on wall, perhaps a small fridge, or a game table, a few books or magazines in a bookcase, a source of music or even a small television, makes the space a great place to lounge.

If you've got power, it's easy to put up lights. If not, provide battery-powered lighting for tasks, and candles for mood lighting (but remember not to leave candles unattended).

As for theme, a lot depends on the shed's purpose. A shed can be a gardening shed, or it can be easily be transformed into a serene place to practise yoga, or an artist's retreat, a place to practise music, a woodworking shop, or a playhouse for kids. Heck, it could even be made into a chicken coop, depending on your municipality's chicken-keeping bylaws.

Back to the beach

Homes in Style

JENNIFER BILL
for Metro Canada

As sunshine and warm temperatures begin to set in full throttle, clothing gets lighter, windows are thrown open, and you can almost taste the ocean's saltwater on your tongue.

If you can't get those tootsies into the sand just yet, bring the beach inside by infusing a breezy, laid-back coastal style into your home for the summer.

Warning: Cravings for umbrella drinks could get a little out of hand.

Laurie Furber, senior vice president and general merchandise manager of the Pottery Barn catalogue, which is currently featuring the coastal style as part of an annual theme, says recreating the beach can spark feel-good memories.

"For most people, the coastal theme is evocative of something they remember fondly, whether it's a beach they visited when they were young, or a vacation they especially enjoyed, or a hometown," said Furber. "For me, it's my husband's family's beach house that we visit every summer. Coastal iconography like shells, coral or fish can trigger those great memories and the happy feelings that go with them."

Furber says faux coral or embroidered sealife pillows work well with an all-white interior. Add more hints of coastal charm by arranging seashells in sand on a level surface, or in a vase, or take a bowl and display loose shells with other beach finds. Hang some coastal-themed art on the wall. Display knick knacks in the form of sea creatures such as starfish, seahorses or crabs and coral, or fluff up the sofa with pillows depicting waterside imagery.

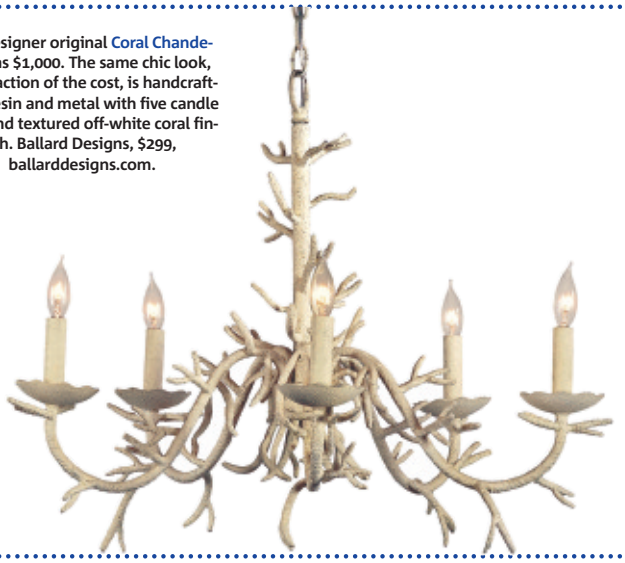
"I have noticed as environmental awareness has heightened, that our customers seem more drawn to natural elements for decorating. Simple decorating ideas like our sand, shells and display hurricanes are an easy way to bring a little nature indoors," Furber added.

Pillows are a great place to start when decorating. Top: Find yourself eye-to-eye with one of the ocean's curviest creatures, embroidered onto natural cotton-linen. The back of the Swimming By Pillow, Seahorse, features a stitched passage from a tale of the deep. Anthropologie, $138, anthropologie.com. Middle: The hand-embroidered Sand Dollar Pillow adds a textural warmth to a sofa. Pottery Barn, $45, potterybarn.ca. Bottom: Think billowing white sails and lounging on the Cote-de-Sud. This Maritime Pillow has vintage maritime silk screens, patches and coordinating trims as part of a nautical collection. Ballard Designs, $75, ballarddesigns.com.

With the Hardshell Knob, this crabby fellow made of brass makes opening drawers and doors a snap. Anthropologie, $22, anthropologie.com.

Create your own nautical retreat at home with a wooden wheel plaque inspired by a vintage ship's wheel. Three sizes feature intricately turned spokes and a hand-painted finish applied in multiple layers for an authentic, sea-weathered look. Ships Wheel 20", $99; 27", $119; 36", $139. Ballard Designs, ballarddesigns.com.

The designer original Coral Chandelier was $1,000. The same chic look, for a fraction of the cost, is handcrafted of resin and metal with five candle arms and textured off-white coral finish. Ballard Designs, $299, ballarddesigns.com.



Giant Clam Shells are handcrafted of resin with pearlescent interior. Ballard Designs, $119, ballarddesigns.com.

Cast from molds made from natural coral pieces, these ocean-inspired Coral Shaped Candles capture the shape and texture of coral in detail. Pottery Barn, Short Spiny Coral ($15), Tall Spiny Coral ($24), Fan Coral ($28), potterybarn.ca.

New toilets take the quiet, high-tech route

Touted as "the original plumbing solution," macerating toilet systems have widely been viewed as a functional, but noisy alternative for situations where installing a bathroom with a conventional toilet would be impossible or cost-prohibitive.

Macerating toilet systems have come a long way in 20 years according to Saniflo's Daniel Cayer.

These systems have come a long way since being introduced to the Canadian market more than 20 years ago and new models are coming into favour with consumers looking to increase the number of washrooms in their homes.

A new generation of high-tech macerating toilets, including Quiet Range models by Saniflo, have upped the ante by eliminating much of the sound produced by the units.

"The development of the Quiet Range represents a major technological improvement compared to previous models," says Daniel Cayer, national sales manager at Saniflo Canada. "The Quiet Range line addresses consumers' requests for a quieter product by incorporating state-of-the-art noise reduction technology as well as improved performance and a sleek new design."

What happens when lots aren't as advertised?

LegalMatters

Jeffrey D. Cowan

jeff@cowanlaw.ca

Q We signed an Agreement of Purchase and Sale in March and in the description the lot depth was described as 100 feet deep. We have previously developed and sold a property on a small lot and are very aware of the lot coverage zoning. According to the lot depth and size we had planned on putting an addition on the property because we didn't have 100 per cent coverage; as we are allowed under the zoning. We realized just before closing that the lot was actually only 93 feet deep thereby reducing our lot size so that we were now at full coverage. Our lawyer has stated that this is a problem, what should we do?

A The first thing is that because the lot was described in the contract as 100 feet deep, you can rely upon this description as a matter of "contract" right up to the day of closing (regardless of any requisition date). Your lawyer should attempt to negotiate an abatement (reduction) in the purchase price to compensate you for the inability of the vendor to deliver what you had contracted for. Your lawyer should be proactive about this problem — even if this is up to the date of closing.

If you find that the vendor is uncooperative, you have the right to tender on the vendor: That you were ready, willing and able to purchase the property but they had not provided the abatement you had requested. This is a horrible situation for both the vendor and the purchaser but a legal necessity if you want to preserve your rights against the other parties.

Let's hope it doesn't come to that point.

‘Housing friendly’ interest rates

RooftopSurfing

I was up in Ottawa last weekend for meetings under the auspices of the Canadian Home Builders’ Association. The economic session is closed to the media, which tells you that it is a very frank information exchange among insiders.

I was pleasantly surprised by what I heard from Dr. Peter Andersen, consulting economist to the CHBA, and if, like me, you are having trouble processing all the mixed housing signals of late, I think you will be impressed too.

It’s definitely a V-shaped economic recovery, Andersen told the hundred or so home builders who got up early last Saturday to hear what he had to say. Andersen noted that Canadian economic growth is currently running around six per cent and that our economy created an astounding 109,000 jobs last month.

“We are not facing interest rate ‘overkill’ in this country; rather, rates are ‘adjusting to normal,’” Andersen said.

He pointed out that mortgage rates went down twice last month (although all we ever read about are the increases) and that the recent European financial crisis will mitigate interest rate increases.

“Interest rates are going to be housing friendly,” Andersen declared.

Addressing the question of whether or not there is a “housing bubble” in Canada, he put matters into perspective by noting that during the financial crisis of late 2008 and early 2009, the only homes that were selling were by those people that had to sell, which resulted, not surprisingly, in house price decreases.

“We are not facing interest rate ‘overkill’ in this country; rather, rates are ‘adjusting to normal.’”
Dr. Peter Andersen

What is now being interpreted as over-valuation is really a return to pre-recession levels. “The $750,000 house that sold for $650,000 in a no-bid market is now going for $750,000, but is that really a 15 per cent increase?” he asked rhetorically. Answering his own question, he stated “that’s not a bubble!”

The other thing that Andersen pointed out that intrigued me was the emerging foreign investor interest in the Toronto and Vancouver real estate markets. I’ve always said that Toronto condos are a huge bargain by global standards and it looks like investors are figuring that out as well.

How to get your home into summer shape

SURVEY With warm weather and air conditioner season fast approaching, Direct Energy has tips to help Canadians get their homes “fit” and ready for summer.

In a survey recently conducted by Angus Reid Public Opinion on behalf of Direct Energy, one third (33 per cent) of Canadians described the fitness/efficiency level of their home as Average, while another 42 per cent describe it as Trim — meaning their home is moderately energy efficient.

Most Canadians say that while home fitness is important to them, they would instead opt to spend money on surface improvements. When asked how they would spend $5,000 on their home, the majority (68 per cent) would rather spend the money to update a room (kitchen, bathroom) than on upgrading a core element of their home.

When it comes to their own personal fitness, Canadians (88 per cent) would overwhelmingly choose to invest in a personal trainer and nutritionist, rather than a quick aesthetic plastic surgery or liposuction fix. While Canadians see the importance of looking after their general physical fitness over the speedier surgical beauty fix, they do not necessarily take the same approach regarding their homes.

“Maintaining a fit home makes good financial sense,” said Dave Walton, Director of Home Ideas at Direct Energy. “Often we don’t think about the cooling or heating elements of our home until it’s too late, and they need repair or replacement. It is important for home owners to keep the inner workings of their home top-of-mind.” METRO NEWS SERVICES

Direct Energy tips

- Schedule an annual maintenance for the air conditioner to ensure it’s fit for the summer ahead.
- Check the SEER (Seasonal energy efficiency ratio) rating — a 13 SEER rating can deliver as much as 28 per cent more efficiency than that of a 10 SEER air conditioner.
- Make a checklist, much like the one a doctor prepares for an annual physical, to track the age and efficiency of each appliance and when they had their last maintenance.
- If you have updated a room in your home recently, consider having the ducts cleaned.

Girls in spikes

Meet the duo behind your favorite pop stars' glam looks

KENYA HUNT
Metro World News

"It's crazy in here right now. We've got candies and cupcakes in one corner and then spikes, knifes and daggers in the other," says Phillipe Blond, one half of the glittery, New York-based design duo, The Blonds.

He's talking about their work studio, which seems to get increasingly busier as their popularity grows.

They're the costumer of choice for pop music's starriest ladies. Lady Gaga, Rihanna, Fergie and Christina Aguilera have all worn The Blonds' spiky, studded corsets and dresses. To place them even further in "Ones To Watch" territory, their work is featured prominently in Sex and the City 2. The business partners and lovers open up.

Q How did you two meet?

A David: It was 10 years ago at the Roxy of all places. When I saw Phillipe, he was super thin and dressed in this cute outfit. He looked like a dancer. So that was my pick-up line. It all started for us at a nightclub.

Q Is that the setting you envision your clothes working in best? They do have a lot of spikes and studs.

A David: I mean, generally the only way you can get away with things like that is by wearing them out at night or on the stage. We don't do all corsets all the time. But when we have the opportunity to dress these modern day showgirls, we do them a lot.

Phillipe: The corset is probably our most requested item.

Q What has been the biggest influence on your work?

A David: Our main inspiration is the female form. Talk about inspiring. Wars have been waged over it. It's the most famous silhouette you can think of. So we like to use the corset to exaggerate and enhance it.

Phillipe: I used to be really obsessed with (the cartoon) Jem and the Holograms and She-Ra when I was growing up. They were so ahead of their time with the whole transformation of going from casual to glamorous. That obsession kind of evolved into our current madness — that '80s sensibility that more is more. More is more, and more is better!

David: Bob Mackie is another one. We just went to see this show in Vegas called Jubilee. It was a Bob Mackie explosion. I couldn't even take it, so insane. It was 50 years of drag and insanity.

Q How did you come about being featured in SATC2?

A Phillipe: We got a crazy, intense phone call from Pat (Field). She was so excited about these jeans that we had done. They were just these embellished bleached stretch jeans with spikes and studs. Pat called and was explaining what she wanted and she suddenly put Sarah on the phone, who was like "Oh my God, I need those." So we ended up making her a pair.

Q And last, what's with all the spikes?

A David: It's funny because with the first collection, we did this theme of light and dark with this glamorous punk girl and rainbow butterfly girl. That's where the spike thing started and it kind of caught on. But we've since refined them. We plate them in rose gold and silver.

The hybrid pant

The jegging combines the style of denim with the comfort of a legging

Fidelity Denim, $169, at Over The Rainbow.

AFIYA FRANCISCO
for Metro Canada

Once discounted as fleeting trends, both skinny jeans and leggings are now such wardrobe staples that they have mutated into "jeggings" — fashion-speak for denim leggings.

Imagine the structured look of denim combined with the comfort of leggings and it's not difficult to understand why this best-of-both-worlds hybrid is one of the most popular trends of the season.

Described as a "comfy, casual version of your favourite skinny jeans" by Karen Richter, showroom manager for the P.R. department at H&M Canada, jeggings are more wearable than you may suspect, Style experts seem to agree that the key to fashionably sporting jeggings is less about body type and more about the importance of pairing them with pieces that offer balance and proportion.

"I actually think that a jegging is amazing on any body type, 24 to 32, we do the full size range," says Lauren Applebaum, brand manager for Hudson Jeans Canada.

Applebaum suggests that it's as easy as 1-2-3. "Pair with a great top, something that's a perfect length. Nothing too bulky, nothing too tight."

"Jeggings look best paired with a tunic or three-quarter length blazer to give a bit of coverage," elaborates Richter.

In the summer, choose a great heel to wear with your jeggings, leaving your ankle exposed, transition into cooler months by tucking them into a boot. Given their versatility, the popularity of jeggings shows no signs of slowing down anytime soon. In fact, expect to see an evolution of the jegging come fall.

The use of super-stretchy denim (as opposed to knit fabrics) offers a legging fit but will see the return of traditional jean details like usable pockets and zippers as with Fidelity Denim's Super Stretch options. Applebaum confirms, "We feel really strongly about jeggings and we're running it in colours for fall. The jegging is something that will be around for awhile."

A touch of retro flair

Pomp and Ceremony accessories add pizzazz to outfits

SOFI PAPAMARKO
or Metro Canada

Toronto designer Andrea Dixon's dazzling accessories offer a burst of retro sweetness to any outfit.

From lavish, bridal-inspired headpieces to old-fashioned pocket squares and ties with Liberty of London prints, Dixon's accessory line Pomp and Ceremony boasts retro sensibilities with a post-modern edge.

"Quite a few years ago, I inherited some items from one of my grandmothers," explains Dixon. "She was stylish and elegant, but never in a fussy way. I can now appreciate how the women in my grandmother's and mother's generations made a few special accessories work (to make) them feel confident and look great."

The first accessory that Dixon ever designed was a fabric necklace. "(It was) bib-style – hundreds of individually sewn fabric florets. It took forever! I still do it the same way but have become much more efficient in the process."

Pomp and Ceremony — the small business — was born when Dixon walked into Toronto store Model Citizen with her wares and owner Julian Finkel ordered a bucket-load of her accessories on the spot. "It was thrilling," Dixon says. "I had to come up with a name quickly… the words peonies, pageantry, my English grandmother Penelope and her stash of '80s Tatler magazines worked their way into (the name) Pomp and Ceremony."

Local accessories line Pomp and Ceremony offers a variety of playful outfit accents, such as these large colourful pins, $67.70 each.

Blind ambition

Despite vision loss, designer keeps creating

As Sergey Ermakov describes one of his dresses, a friend pulls a slinky evening gown off the racks, bringing it close to ask if it is the one. "Yes," the blind couturier says as he feels its beaded white leaves trimmed with gold.

When Ermakov lost most of his vision at the age of 30 from diabetic retinopathy, a complication of diabetes that causes retina damage, he thought his career was finished.

"It was a very difficult period," said Ermakov, speaking through a Russian translator.

But the now 37-year-old said his need to earn a living and his love for fashion helped him continue.

Ermakov, who opened his own design studio in Kyiv at the age of 24, has lost about 95 per cent of his vision but can still see fabric colours if he gets very close. To create designs, he relies not only on his design team and his memories, but also on his sense of touch.

I.M.OTERO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Through a Russian translator, Ermakov said he "can imagine by touch." He said he can also get an understanding of what a client wants just by talking to them. He sketches his designs and then turns to his team to turn them into reality.

"(Being) blind, it's a more psychological problem," Ermakov said.

Ermakov brought his luxurious designs to Dallas this spring for a fundraiser to benefit the American Foundation for the Blind's Center on Vision Loss and The Fashionistas, a group dedicated to promoting fashion with exhibitions, scholarships and educational programs.

He put on a series of events, including two fashion shows featuring dozens of his elaborate creations, which incorporate tulle, taffeta and silk with such adornments as feathers, beads, crystals, pearls and lace. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Geek chic

Skip the plans for laser eye surgery, eyeglasses have never been sexier

Erase all of those images of childhood "four eyes" taunts and ad promos for Ugly Betty.

Eyeglasses are no longer symbolic of geekdom. They're as legitimate a fashion accessory as a pair of statement heels. And we're not talking Sarah Palin spectacles.

Instead, think Prada's autumn 2010 show, which featured subversively sexy models in cat eye frames, or Louis Vuitton's collection for the same season, which had models wearing Mad Men style glasses with cobwebby lens.

So rather than viewing them as a prescriptive necessity, make the eyeglasses an extension of your look.plains.

Cruz unloads instant club hits

Taio Cruz

Album: Rokstarr
Label: Universal
Rating: ●●●

THIS BRITISH R&B dance pop artist, and Rihanna's Umbrella co-writer, is a star in the U.K. and it's hard not to see why. His sophomore record is loaded with instant club hits. Opener Dynamite, and many of the following tunes, is jacked up with soaring choruses and throbbing over-the-top keyboards. He takes a page out of R. Kelly's book on Dirty Pictures, a duet with Kei$ha about trading naughty photos. While it's got the chart topping formula down to a tee, it lacks personality and substance. It feels like Taio put a few ideas into a hit making machine and this is what popped out.

The Beauties

Album: The Beauties
Label: Six Shooter Records
Rating: ●●●●

A RESIDENCY AT the Dakota Tavern earned the Beauties a reputation as Toronto's best bar band. On-the-edge, dark and creative, this is a band forged out of closing-time jams. It's one thing, however, to impress late night beer drinkers with raw, high-energy roots rock; another to translate that vibe onto a record. The Beauties pull it off with elan on their debut LP. The first three tracks (Fashion Blues, Without You, Devil Do) could easily fit into the catalogues of Wilco or Son Volt, while extended tracks like Heaviest of the World and You Wish Better With Me beat with the heart of Crazy Horse.

Jack Johnson

Album: To the Sea
Label: Brushfire/Universal
Rating: ●●●

MOST PEOPLE HAVE a love-hate relationship with Jack Johnson. One camp thinks his music is incredibly staid, banal acoustic rock. The other loves his mellow vibes and warm rhythms. His latest won't change people's opinions — it's another collection of smooth surfer sounds. The disc starts off strong, with the light infectious rocker You and Your Heart, while the bluesy riff-happy number At or With Me gives Johnson the chance to sound upbeat for a chance.

Royal Wood

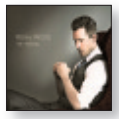
Album: The Waiting
Label: MapleMusic
Rating: ●●●½



CANADA HAS A great tradition of singer-songwriters from Gordon Lightfoot to Ron Sexsmith. For a while it seemed like Royal Wood was destined to become a piano-driven version, following in their footsteps. Here, however, he takes a turn toward sophisticated pop melodies with the help of Sarah MacLachlan producer Pierre Marchand and a coterie of outstanding studio musicians. It works extraordinarily well on tracks like first single On Top of Your Love and album opener You Can't Go Back. Wood has the sort of vocal delivery that can drift to the back of the mix and, for the most part, Marchand has pushed it forward.

Clay Aiken

Album: Tried and True
Label: Decca/Universal
Rating: ●

THIS RECORDING SIMPLY has no reason to exist. We do not need an over-the-hill American Idol runnerup crooning maudlin covers of songs that should have been locked away long ago. Moon River? It's Impossible? What Kind of Fool Am I? These are some of the most over-recorded songs in history. It's not possible to make them fashionable again. Ever. This is an album only Clay Aiken's parents could love. No wonder Simon Cowell quit. He couldn't bare the thought that people might hold him partially responsible for this crap.

The Acorn

Album: No Ghost
Label: Paper Bag Records
Rating: ●●●

ON 2007'S Glory Hope Mountain, Ottawa's The Acorn brewed up a concept album with such gravitas that you could easily overlook the actual music. Not the case here with No Ghost, on which the band lets the expansive, indie-bred folk songs exist independently. With the narrative gone and new members involved, The Acorn's melodic side shines brighter, but Rolf Klausener's lyrics and the more streamlined arrangements pale in comparison to GHM's indigenous flavours. The Acorn seem like a resilient bunch and No Ghost isn't without its stirring moments.

Montréal goes country

City inspires Ladies of the Canyon debut, Haunted Woman

KEITH CARMAN
for Metro Canada

Architecture, artistic communities, libation-induced revelry ... Montréal, holds a great deal of reverence for many things. But it's not exactly the first place one would look to glean information on country music's latest rising stars.

However, that's exactly what's happening: Canada's Sin City is becoming renowned for fostering a thriving country scene, spearheaded by Ladies of the Canyon, a fresh-faced quartet comprised of twangy divas Maia Davies (vocals, keyboards, guitar), Senja Sargeant (vocals, guitar, mandolin), Jasmine Bleile (vocals, guitar) and Anna Ruddick (vocals, bass).

Still, Davies says Quebec is not the nail by which their 10-gallon hats are hung.

"Music is borderless and very accepting," she states bluntly. "I don't think it matters that our music isn't from a traditional country music birthplace because people just love to share in this. It doesn't matter where you're born as long as your love of music is sincere. We're glad to be a part of that and people have been incredibly supportive."

Ladies of the Canyon's debut album Haunted Woman is now out.

Davies' modesty is quite the understatement. What she mildly refers to as support has actually been a rumbling tide of ravenous fans chomping at the bit for Ladies of the Canyon's debut Haunted Woman, which was released this week. Blending elements of rock, roots and country via influences such as Bob Dylan, Fleetwood Mac and The Eagles, Haunted Woman appeals to many tastes. Not bad for a group that came together almost by accident.

"We never really thought we were starting a band," Davies admits. "It just kind of happened. The four of us were working at two different bars and met because of the great band scene. We'd be playing open stages and met showing up at each others' shows/bars. We just started jamming, became friends and had a jam night at one house every week."

After years of struggling independently, the collective that is Ladies of the Canyon has been effortlessly successful in a decidedly short amount of time. Their debut single Follow Me Down is already charting across the nation.

Davies contemplates the strange ease that permeates Ladies of the Canyon's efforts, relegating their appeal to a fine mix of musical diversity.

"We're definitely fans of country but we're not just one style of music. Instead of forcing one word on us, I embrace that diversity. We're four people with so many influences between us, that's a huge part of what makes our sound what it is. We've had to go head-to-head and mesh our influences."

Punk 'Mortal Kombat'

Green Day follow Beatles with their own Rock Band game

With a hit Broadway show and now their own edition of the Rock Band franchise, Green Day is establishing themselves as a punk rock brand.

"I just like being diverse and trying new things as far as Green Day is concerned," says frontman Billie Joe Armstrong.

The Grammy-winning, multiplatinum trio joins the Beatles as the only other act immortalized in Rock Band; the video game is being released next Tuesday. "It's like a glorified karaoke machine," Armstrong said. "Or Mortal Kombat with guitars."

As players progress through the game, they gain access into the band's media vault, where they can unlock rare collectible images, and over 40 minutes of unreleased video. These include performances, outtakes, interviews, and even a tour of their transportation.

"You see old footage of us from the Bookmobile, and weird old performances and stuff no one's looked at in almost twenty years," Armstrong said.

The Green Day edition of Rock Band is out next Tuesday.

Bits from those old performances help recreate the kinetic energy of the band playing live. Developers went through many hours of footage to get it right, and even used stand-in performers to fine-tune the computer-generated version on the punk rock trio.

"As far as video games are concerned it's pretty close," Armstrong said. "The Beatles wrote some of the greatest songs ever, but it wasn't challenging to get their movement down (on Rock Band) because they didn't really move that much."

Regarding their computer-generated likeness, the consensus was positive.

"Oh man, we're hot on computers," said drummer Tre Cool, while Dirnt joked: "I don't know if they got enough pimples on me."

"You see old footage of us from ... weird old performances and stuff no one's looked at in almost twenty years."

In the game, players perform in three different venues, each significant to the band. There's a punk rock club, which is an amalgamation of various places Green Day played in the early days; the Fox Theater in their hometown in Oakland, California; and the site of their first stadium show.

"The Milton Keynes (stadium) show was quite momentous for us. It actually was the concert that was filmed for Bullet in a Bible, Dirnt said, referring to the live DVD that was recorded in 2005 on the band's American Idiot tour.

Sheen reaches agreement

Actor accused of assault

Charlie Sheen has reached an agreement with authorities in Colorado over domestic violence allegations involving the actor's wife, a prosecutor said yesterday.

The agreement was confirmed by Chief Deputy District Attorney Arnold Mordkin, who declined to disclose details.

Sheen has pleaded not guilty to menacing, criminal mischief and assault charges stemming from an argument with his wife, Brooke Mueller Sheen, on Christmas Day at an Aspen home where they were on vacation.

The most serious charge is menacing, a felony that carries a maximum three-year prison sentence.

Sheen's attorney Richard Cummins did not immediately return phone messages seeking comment.

Sheen is scheduled to be in court Monday for a disposition hearing. His trial had been scheduled for July 21.

Cummins had sought to have statements thrown out that the Two and a Half Men actor made to police investigating the case. Cummins argued that an officer questioned Sheen in the basement of a house without advising him of his right to remain silent.

Charlie Sheen denied threatening or hitting his wife but told police that he broke two pairs of her eyeglasses in front of her.

A police officer's arrest affidavit quoted Brooke Sheen as saying the actor pinned her on a bed while holding a knife to her throat and making a threat.

An audio recording of a police emergency call, a woman who identifies herself as Brooke tells the dispatcher, "I thought I was gonna die for one hour."

Brooke Sheen's attorney, Yale Galanter, previously said that Brooke Sheen had asked prosecutors to drop the case.

Galanter did not immediately return a message left by The Associated Press.

Kilmer faces county board for NM quip

CELEB Actor Val Kilmer is set to appear before a board of county commissioners in New Mexico to explain derogatory comments he's been quoted as making about the state.

San Miguel County Attorney Jesus Lopez says the manager of Kilmer's Pecos River Ranch told officials the Batman Forever actor plans to show up on June 23.

A 2003 Rolling Stone article quoted Kilmer as saying he lives in the "homicide capital of the Southwest" and that 80 per cent "of the people in my county are drunk." Kilmer has denied the statements.

Killer Comebacks
The series chronicling how certain stars rise, fall and rise again returns for a new season with an episode focusing on Ellen DeGeneres. When she and her sitcom character came out of the closet, it was one of 1997's top entertainment stories, but the show's popularity fell off, and it left the air in 1998. DeGeneres didn't disappear, but she's become far more visible in recent years with her daytime talk show and her new berth as a judge on "American Idol." 11 AM on TROP

Africa on the Move
With South Africa hosting soccer's FIFA World Cup starting next week, we'll be seeing a lot of what used to be called the Dark Continent. This new two-part documentary is a reminder of what a misnomer that old nickname is as it gets up close and personal with the vibrant, diverse people and cultures that inhabit Africa's 50-plus countries. Part 2 airs next Thursday. 8 PM on CBC

Low prices on olive oil

Lusitania Supermarket Ltd. (152 Augusta Ave.) in Kensington Market specializes in Portuguese sausages, canned good and spices. But it's their olive oils that you'll want to stock up on — some are priced as low as $3.99. Call 416-593-9495 for info and hours. STEPHANIE DICKISON/FOR METRO TORONTO

Dinner for two with drinks: $55

It's 36 degrees tonight so we sit inside to reap the benefits of air conditioning. Besides, the patio is full.

The interior takes the pose of New York resto — exposed brick walls, iron chandeliers and rich burgundy wood tables and booths. The menu offers a ton of interesting, sophisticated choices: appetizers, pizzas, pastas, mains and specials at affordable prices.

Take the soup, for instance. Tomato, fish and tortilla chowder ($5.50) is thick, rich and spirited, though the tortillas get lost in the mix.

And the Grilled Calamari ($10.50) is brilliant, marinated with chipotle, lime and olive oil, accompanied with a snappy mango, tomato and red pepper salsa and tender greens.

The Penne Anatra ($16) is such a divine find that we both choose it.

Al dente penne pasta, tossed with sumptuous oyster mushrooms and sun-dried tomatoes with bite is magnificent, and soaks up the chive vodka cream sauce, which is good enough to stand on its own.

Keeping it from perfection? With three and a half small slices, the delectable smoked duck is more of a garnish than main component. Service is erratic, but we don't mind so much tonight, as we've got ½ litre of sangria ($20) to keep us company.

Dining out

CREPE, KREPE The crepe craze continues, but this time with a twist. Krepesz (253 Augusta Ave.) creates palacsinta, Hungarian pancakes, similar to crepes but with distinctive Hungarian ingredients and flavours. krepesz.com.

PUB FARE Looking for somewhere nice, but casual to go after work with friends? The Roy Public House (894 Queen St. E.) is small, but comfy. The menu has some fun items. Go to theroy.ca for details. STEPHANIE DICKISON/FOR METRO TORONTO

In brief

SHOPPING WITH EASE The Market by Longo's HBC (100 Bloor St. E.) has a great layout and fantastic finds like cooked rack of lamb, ready-to-cook meals-in-a-bowl and a sushi bar. Go to longos.com for more.

Lindsay finds a loophole

WELL, YOU CAN'T SAY SHE'S NOT RESOURCEFUL It hasn't been the best few weeks for Lindsay Lohan. Aside from having to deal with random drug testing and an alcohol-monitoring anklet, the troubled starlet had to have her wisdom teeth pulled. Luckily, she received special permission to take painkillers after the operation, according to TMZ. "We advised the Probation Department of the dental appointment, which was made well in advance of last week's court hearing," Lohan's lawyer tells the website, adding that they agreed to provide "documentation about any medications that Lindsay would be taking."

Separate flooding accidents force High School stars to shack up

ALTHOUGH VANESSA PROVES SHE SHOULD STILL BE LIVING UNDER PARENTAL SUPERVISION A recent pair of flooding accidents at home have forced Zac Efron and Vanessa Hudgens to get a little closer, according to the National Enquirer. First, Hudgens left a faucet running at her Studio City, Calif., home, forcing her out and doing $250,000 worth of damage. Then Efron's pool overflowed, causing damage to his house. While waiting for repairs to be completed, the pair have been sharing a $7,500-a-month beach house in Malibu — and they couldn't be happier. "It's been a happy twist of fate for Zac and Vanessa," a source says. "They're living together and have never been closer."

Mariah confirms pregnancy rumours

HATCHING ANOTHER SONGBIRD The speculation over whether Mariah Carey is pregnant or not is now over, according to Radar Online. Sources tell the website that the singer and husband Nick Cannon are officially expecting. "They're both very excited and very happy," the source says. "Mariah and Nick want to keep the pregnancy quiet as long as they can." The desire for secrecy could explain why during a road-trip up the Malibu coast over the weekend, Carey opted to not get out of the car when photographers were around.

Heigl wants to add to her growing brood

AND ALSO, MATCHING BABIES ARE SO IN THIS SEASON Katherine Heigl is so thrilled with her 9-month-old adopted daughter that she's ready to expand her family again. "We would like to have a second child, adopted or biological. We're not ruling it out," Heigl tells Germany's Gala magazine. "I often plunge into things and hope everything will be alright." She says that if she and husband Josh Kelly did adopt again, they'd likely go to Haiti. "There are so many parent-less children. It breaks my heart. I want to help," she says.

Film fest to honour Efron

FOR HIS LONG, PROLIFIC AND ILLUSTRIOUS CAREER (THAT CRACK WAS FOR THE MALIBU BEACH HOUSE) In other Efron news, the teen heartthrob will be honoured by the Maui Film Festival in Hawaii later this month with its Shining Star Award.

The star of High School Musical 3: Senior Year and 17 Again will accept the award June 16, the festival's opening night.

Festival director Barry Rivers says the 22-year-old actor is an "exemplary shining star."

Rivers says this year's mantra is "Trust the Future," and Efron is an actor with an extraordinary career behind him and an even more brilliant one ahead of him.

Fire Roasted Chicken with Apricot Glaze

Recipe Developed by Paula Bowman

PREP TIME: 10 MINUTES
COOK TIME: 20 MINUTES
INGREDIENTS:

1/4 cup apricot jam
3 tbsp cider vinegar
1/4 tsp freshly ground black pepper plus more for seasoning
1 garlic clove, minced
1 1/2 lb skinless and boneless chicken breast, cut into 1-inch cubes
2 tbsp extra virgin olive oil, plus more for oiling grill

METHOD:

1. Preheat grill to medium-high.

2. Combine first 4 ingredients together in bowl. Stir until smooth and well blended and set aside.

3. Thread chicken pieces onto 8 metal or presoaked wooden skewers and season with salt and pepper. Lightly brush grill with olive oil, place chicken skewers on grill and cook for 2 minutes. Turn skewers over one quarter turn and baste cooked side with glaze. Continue to cook, basting and turning as needed until cooked through, about 8-9 minutes total.

ARIES ♈
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
If you have not yet been enticed by a new hobby or interest it is just a matter of time. You are on the lookout for new thrills — and you'll find plenty.

TAURUS ♉
APRIL 21-MAY 21
Something completely unexpected is about to turn your world upside down. You may not be one for surprises but this surprise will be welcome.

GEMINI ♊
MAY 22-JUNE 21
This is a time for action, a time to put what you have learned in recent months to good use. You know what you want and you know how to get it.

CANCER ♋
JUNE 22-JULY 22
Ask for help if you need it. Don't try to do it all on your own. You have done no end of favors for friends and relatives in the past. Call them in,

LEO ♌
JULY 23-AUG 23
Life is never dull when Leo is around and, yes, it seems that others are expecting you to put on a show again. Don't do it if your heart is not in it.

VIRGO ♍
AUG 24-SEPT 22
Those who thought they knew you will have to think again as you do something completely unexpected with your life.

LIBRA ♎
SEPT 23-OCT 23
Something wonderful is about to happen and you will undoubtedly benefit from the experience. It is unlikely to be a material change.

SCORPIO ♏
OCT 24-NOV 22
You will be asked to do something you don't like or deal with someone you don't approve of today. If you are smart you will do it.

SAGITTARIUS ♐
NOV 23-DEC 21
A friend or family member may deserve to be criticized today but is it necessary? This may be one of those occasions when it's best to just let it go.

CAPRICORN ♑
DEC 22-JAN 20
Don't mess with things you don't understand. That is always good advice but more so today as you encounter a situation that is alien to you.

AQUARIUS ♒
JAN 21-FEB 18
Fate always guides you in the right direction, regardless of how many detours you take along the way.

PISCES ♓
FEB 19-MARCH 20
Put yourself in another person's place and imagine how you look to them. If you can you will know why they seem so reluctant to interact with you.
